The Blue and the Gray.

The following poem was written by Capt. D. H. Goyen, of Lexington, Ky., and read in the Opera House in Shelbyville, Ky., May 30, 1890. On that day the Confederate and Federal Veterans of the Civil War marched arm in arm, and decorated the graves of each other's dead, the first event of the kind in Kentucky:

OUR BRAVE DEAD.

Peacefully sleep, 'neath the sods of the valley,
Peacefully sleep 'neath thy covering of green,
Thy warfare is over, the retreat nor the rally,
The cannon's loud boom nor the glittering sheen
Of the bayonet, the musketry's rattle,
Can arouse thee again, as they oft did of yore—
Sweetly then sleep, thou has fought thy last battle,
The red field of carnage shall know thee no more.

Brave as the bravest, as such we will ever
Remember thy valor and honor thy name;
Wore they blue or the gray, foul slander can never
Cast a stain on their courage; detract from their fame.
They rushed to the conflict at the first call of duty,
Which proved them sincere and honest and true;
Then let flowers be strewn in their bloom and their beauty,
Alike on the graves of the gray and the blue.

Old Time with his sythe has gathered in many,
Who oft met as foes, though equally brave,
And though many survive, there scarcely are any
Who do not now stand on the brink of the grave.
Their locks are now silvered, that once were golden,
Their forms are now bent, though manly of yore;
The march of the legions are not as of olden;
Soon the place that now knows them shall know them no more.

Like brothers we meet—all rancor is vanished,
The tocsin of war is not sounded to-day,
And passion's mad strife gentle peace has banished
Alike from the hearts of the blue and the gray.
By the graves of our dead, under hill side and heather,
We meet once again our vows to renew—
Though once far apart, we now stand together—
Of one country, one flag, are the gray and the blue.

Then sweet be the flowers we give to our brothers—
The laurel and roses we lay on their graves,
And the offering we bring we give not to others,
For the dust that we honor is that of the brave.
Peaceful then sleep, and hushed be thy slumber,
Thou art sacred to us as we stand here to-day;
For of all the dead in this land without number,
Thou art ours alone of the blue and the gray.

It is Dangerous to Neglect a Cold.

How often do we hear it remarked: "It's only a cold," and a few days later learn that the man is on his back with pneumonia. This is of such common occurrence that a cold, however slight, should not be disregarded. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy counteracts any tendency of a cold to result in pneumonia, and has gained its great popularity and extensive sale by its prompt cures of this most common ailment. It always cures and is pleasant to take. For sale by Dr. W. N. Craig, the popular druggist at Stanford, Ky.

Not if as Rich As Rockefeller.

If you had all the wealth of Rockefeller, the Standard Oil magnate, you could not buy a better medicine for bowel complaints than Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. The most eminent physician can not prescribe a better preparation for colic and diarrhoea, both for children and adults. The uniform success of this remedy has shown it to be superior to all others. It never fails, and when reduced with water and sweetened, is pleasant to take. Every family should be supplied with it. Sold by Dr. W. N. Craig, the popular druggist, at Stanford.

Whoever is named to head the ticket must be free from taint and smell of the machine if he expects to win."
